

VenGen relaunches the company website

Amsterdam, The Netherlands – March 7, 2006 - The life sciences start-up management company and hands-on investment fund VenGen today relaunches its website www.VenGen.nl. VenGen cordially invites all their relations to visit the website, to learn about the newly defined approach and to discover how to collaborate with VenGen when appropriate. Any suggestions and remarks are most welcome.

About VenGen

VenGen is short for Venture Genesis: the making of a venture. This is exactly what VenGen - founded in 2001 - focuses on: VenGen helps to create successful life science ventures.

In partnership with scientists we co-found life science ventures and provide the seed capital as well as experienced management, support, and strategic planning. These are essential to building a successful company around a breakthrough technology. We also provide access to an extensive scientific, business and investor network that is of great value as a new venture matures beyond the early stages. Our focus is on scientific breakthroughs which have the potential to have a significant impact on the life science industries. We encourage scientists and entrepreneurs to contact us at the idea stage, even before a company is formed or a business plan has been written. For more information, please visit www.VenGen.nl
